SCOTT STUTZMAN

Associate, Munro & Associates, Inc.

Scott offers a diverse and multidisciplinary background of five plus years in leadership/outreach programs and customer service. Beginning in his junior year of high school, Scott was recruited by his church to lead an after-school bible study every week with fellow Christian students. During the three years that Scott led the study, the membership level of the group nearly tripled in size.

Scott also organized and directed a non-profit concert to benefit Haitians after the devastating 2010 earthquake. In two months and with little to no cost for the event, he managed to raise nearly fifteen hundred dollars for humanitarian aid, selling tickets for the event while still attending classes. Scott also has several years of missionary experience traveling with his home church to Nicaragua, New York City, and the streets of Detroit, Michigan. These experiences have helped to provide Scott with the skills necessary to create and maintain great customer working relationships and a positive work environment.

Scott attended Oakland Technical Campus – Northwest, where he enrolled in courses in Engineering and Emerging Technologies coming out with a basic foundation in circuitry, pneumatics, tooling, drafting, and CAD. Scott also attended Spring Arbor University in Spring Arbor, Michigan where he enrolled in business leadership and campus leadership courses. Scott then transferred to Western Michigan University where his coursework covered marketing, public relations, and supply chain management.

At Munro, Scott is in charge of customer support and event coordination at a benchmarking facility known as the Munro Knowledge Center. He is in direct contact with third party companies and maintains a tight schedule for testing and the gathering of technical data. Scott also works hands on with customer projects, workshops, and the withdrawing of data. His knowledge in the automotive industry has increased tremendously since his first day at Munro and he continues to learn something new every day.

Scott currently resides with his family in Holly, Michigan.
